THOSE who delight in wholesale hangings will regret not being at the show at Fort Smith in the Indian Territory where six men were hung at once on Friday last. But indeed justice claimed but a meager contribution from the criminal list. There were before the Court 37 cases for murder, and in that pandemonium known as the Indian Territory, there have been in the territory nearly one hundred and fifty murders within the year to say nothing of deadly assaults, highway robberies, horse stealing—the most deadly offence of all in the territories. Six were made the pence offering to justice for the crimes of all the others.

THE OPINION of Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal seems to be accepted as gospel by some of our contemporaries as fixing the eligibility of Tilden as the Democratic candidate. Our Washington correspondent falls into the same views, and they are based upon the fundamental idea that without New York no Democratic candidate can hope to be elected, and that New York will support none other but Tilden. The importance attached to New York is undoubtedly over-estimated; but we think injustice is done to the State in ascribing to her that degree of selfishness that she will support none but her own son. New York has been indulged since the war with two Democratic candidates. Both of them were defeated. That might be good and sufficient reason why another State might be indulged in its preferences.

At the same time, we concede the strength, the ability and the qualifications of Governor Tilden. His position on the financial question is not going to hurt him in a canvass where the question of currency must become secondary to the other great issues before the country. Upon these issues Mr. Tilden's record is unimpeachable, and his administration of the government of New York is a fair index of what might be expected from him as Chief Magistrate of the nation.

As we have often said, the South makes no choice and urges no preferences, content to endorse the action of our Northern brethren. Their choice they will approve and support earnestly, provided it is made from among those who have been with us in action and in sympathy and who will carry out those measures of reform and restore those principles of equal justice to which the South alone can look for peace and prosperity. Therefore if it be Gov. Tilden, or Mr. Bayard, or Mr. Hendricks, or General Hancock, if either one prove the choice of the Northern wing of our party he will have the cordial support of the Democrats of the South. We are in no mood to split hairs on questions of finance. We want peace and we want prosperity, and we believe the election of either one of these gentlemen will bring it to us.

Gingerly and Wrong.

(Petersburg Index-Appeal)

Col. Pool has not found Siloam. More even letters will not do. The world is too specific; where are the proofs to the contrary? We think the North Carolina press is dealing with this case in a manner altogether gingerly and wrong.

But the Republican goes on to make its story good, and adds in those little

An Old Fashioned New York Bank Story.

[New York Letter to Boston Journal.]

One of our banks found that the cashier had stolen the entire capital. A meeting was called of the stockholders to wind the affairs up. One man proposed to try again as the cashier was a special one and very valuable. "Whom can we trust?" was the inquiry. A director said, "I can find you a young man that you can trust. He is a true blue Cameronian Presbyterian. You can trust him with uncounted gold." The young man was a teller in one of the city banks. He was elected cashier, and began his herculean work. He brought the stock up to 160 with none in the market. He is now President, while a stock of $25,000 a month. His influence is great, and on three occasions saved the bank from utter ruin. On one of these occasions a great cash company was a depositor of the bank. The outside appearance was fair, but rumor said the institution was in trouble. One morning the bank President received a visit. The visitor said: "We must have two millions this morning, and you bank must stand it." The cashier, who had been universally favorable to both, said to him, "and have kept a heavy balance with you for years. We are now in trouble and you must come to our relief." "I cannot help you," said the President, "without ruining three thousand customers who look to us to protect them. You have kept your money in our bank because you believed it was safe. Your offer of a heavy bonus goes for nothing. This bank has never paid a mill over seven per cent. and never will." The institution closed its doors before noon.

There is only wanting a match to fire the train that has long been laid. Grant wanted to fire it long ago, but he waited to do it at the most politic moment. He could not do it when Mexico expressed officially her regret at the lawless deeds of bandits on her frontier, who might be Mexicans, but outlaws nevertheless beyond control of the government of the Republic; and so the protestations of friendliness were accepted, and the hand of hostility was stayed, and a Mexican war was averted. Now, Mexico gives the opportunity. The bandits have grown into revolutionists. They outnumber the national troops. They hold the frontier. They seize the customs. They levy contributions upon the merchants. And so the rights of foreigners are infringed on. Their property is seized on. Their property is taken from them—and the American navy and army interposes, and the train is fired.

There is no reluctance on the American side to engage in war. The whole frontier has long been waiting for it. The whole army of contractors is ready. The whole army of land-grabbers is ready. And the spirit of territorial acquisition is lively as it always has been in the Anglo Saxon heart. No doubt that both the navy and the army will be quite willing to construe these instructions most liberally, and then we may expect the ball to open. Unless, indeed, the troops of the Republic now marching upon the revolutionists should overcome them. But national unity is a weak bond in Mexico. The government is unpopular, because it has been too peaceable, and it is quite probable, that when the two hostile armies meet, they will fraternize in friendly embrace, and then enter upon a glorious career of brigandage or revolution, and there is the opportunity of the United States, long waited for and come at last.

Stripped stockings.

Over a month ago Mrs. William G. Waite, of Elizabethtown, purchased some fancy stockings for her little boy, only five years of age. A few days afterwards he was taken suddenly ill without the least apparent cause, and a physician was hastily summoned to the relief of the child. Mrs. Waite, at once, suspected that he had been poisoned, but there was a mystery to all. At last the new stockings were suggested, and upon the advice of the physician they were sent to a chemist for examination. The chemist discovered that the coloring in the stripes contained a large quantity of arsenic, and thus the child's illness was explained. Mrs. Waite, with a touch of another's feelings, at once informed the manager of the store where she had purchased the stockings in order that he might stop theirs, and thus save other children whose parents might make the same mistake. For some weeks the child's recovery was doubtful, but a change for the better occurred night before last, and it is hoped that he will soon be able to be about.—St. Louis Democrat 13th.

Dangerous Somnambulism.

The Lynchburg Virginian of Thursday says: "As the north-bound passenger train on the Virginia Midland Road, due here at 6 a. m., was approaching Charlottesville last night, a young man who had been sound slumbering in a seat, suddenly and suddenly to leap up, rush to the door of the car, and spring to the ground. Capt. Peyton rang the bell, but as the train was rushing along at the rate of thirty miles an hour, it had gone a considerable distance before it was brought to a stand-still. It was started back, and the young man was met running at full speed and making night hideous with his screams 'to stop them cars!' He was taken aboard and an examination developed the fact that his injuries amounted to nothing worse than a skinned nose and a slight abrasion upon his hip, caused by a pistol in his pocket, which strange to say had not been discharged by the jar. The young man's explanation was that he dreamed there was a collision, and he jumped off to save himself."

Education in North Carolina.

(Baltimore Sun.)

It will be recollect that soon after the close of the civil war considerable attention was given by friends in Baltimore to rehabilitating affairs in certain parts of North Carolina, establishing schools there for the poor, &c. The following, from a Grange record, indicates that the work still goes bravely on.

"A Normal School for white teachers will be held at Greensboro, N. C., commencing Monday, July 10, 1876, and continuing five weeks, under the auspices of the superintendent of the 'Baltimore Association of Friends,' who has been conducting normal schools in this and adjoining counties for several years. The county commissioners for the benefit of teachers in the county. Teachers in other counties will be instructed free of charge, and they are invited to be present."

Hard To Endure.

(Turner's Falls Reporter.)

After a man has been drilled through the art of editing a newspaper, he feels that he has mistreated his calling when some ignorant ones, who never patronized a newspaper a dollar's worth in his life, travels through wind and weather to point out defects which he alone could tell the editor how to remedy. Why he continues to do so, I do not know.

He is a true blue Cameronian Presbyterian.

It happened the other day on the railroads. The train had just left and the conductor was making his first round, when he observed a small and delicate dog with a bushy tail, and bright black eyes, sitting cosily in the seat beside a young lady, so that it made his heart throb. He stopped the train, and, after remarking that it was duty, and he remarked that it was a dog, he said, "I'm very sorry to have dogs in the passenger cars."

"It is that, is it?" and she jumped in a lovely brown eyes at him beseechingly. "What in the world will I do?" "I'll tell you, my dear, miss. We'll get you in a baggage car, and he'll be happy as a robin in spring."

"I'll put my nice white dog in a very sturdy, dirty baggage car?"

"I'm awfully sorry miss, I do as you say, but the rules of this company are as inflexible as the laws of the Medes and their other fellow,

you know. He shall have my overcoat to lie on, and the trainman shall give him a glass of water every time he opens his mouth."

"Just think it's awful mean, so I do, and I know somebody will steal

the dog, and will," and she showed a hysterical cry that nearly broke the conductor's heart; but he was quiet, and sang to the brakeman,

and was playing a solo on the stove:

"Here, Andy, take this dog over into the baggage car, and tell 'em to take just the best kind of care of him."

The young lady pouted, but the brakeman reached over and picked the minute up, and said, "I'll do it, my dear, I'll do it."

It was a two-week-old baby, but as she had a strange expression came and she said hastily to the conductor, "If you just hold him a minute and put this poker away," and he got out at the car door and held

The conductor no sooner had his hand on the dog than he looked round for a hole to fall through.

"Wh-who-why, this is a worsed moir. " Didn't you know that?"

"I'm most awfully sorry to say I didn't know that," and he laid the
